

Government of Alberta Announces Review of Income Verification Process

On November 21 on the eve of National Housing Day, Minister of Seniors and Housing, the Honourable Josephine Pon announced that the Government of Alberta will make it easier for Albertans to apply for affordable housing programs by conducting a review of the current income verification process.

"We have listened to tenants, applicants, and housing providers," said Minister Pon, "They have told us that they need an easier and simpler process to complete applications to review income."

Many individuals and families applying for Capital Region Housing programs often find the process difficult with extensive amounts of documents to submit at once in order to be approved for housing.

Missing documents can also affect the timelines of the verification process.

Through this initiative CRH individuals and families will have an easier experience during the application process to obtain a safe and affordable home.

At CRH we are committed to assisting 25,000 people find and live in a home they can afford to improve lives and promote social and economic stability.
